MISCELLANEOUS.

Tanning and Milling. THE subscriber still owns the King William Tannerry, at which the usual tanning operations are carried on. Good Hides always bought, or taken in exchange for Leather.

At the King William Mills he carries on the Milling business, as heretofore—the Mills, after sundry improvements and alterations, being now suited both for grinding for toll and the manufacture of grain. The fact of these arrangements being permanent will secure proper regulations.

MRS. SHEFFEY'S SELECT SCHOOL FOR YOUNG LADIES, AT KALORAMA, STAUNTON, VIRGINIA.

MRS. SHEFFEY having been obliged by circumstances to engage in the task of education, takes this method of calling attention to the School under

The Seminary which she formerly conducted has The Seminary which she formerly conducted has, within the last three or four years, given place to a family school—the number limited to the steeles—all of whom are required to be boarders. By this change, Mrs. S. feels hetself much better enabled to do her duty to those committed to her care, the small number of pupils admitted into the school rendering it comparatively easy committed into the school rendering it comparatively easy for her to exercise a parental supervision over them.

The cuttivation of habits of neatness, order and punctuality, the development and regulation of the intellectual powers, and, above all, the careful training of the moral part, are what Mrs. Shelfey understands by the word education. Nor does she affect to despise those adornments of the gentler sex which come under the head of "manners and accomplishments;"—she cannot think grace of manner detracts aught from benevolence of feeling, or the ability to give pleasure renders the desire to do so at all the less laudable.

As regards the course of study adopted by her, Mrs. S. would merely say, she has found from experience that the time allotted in this country to the education of young ladies is too short to admit of their making any real attainment in "the whele circle of the sciences."—She prefers, therefore, that her pupils, as a general thing, should undertake a few branches at a time, ac quire an accurate knowledge and clear understanding of them, and proceed gradually to such other branches as their stay at school will admit.

Mrs. Sheffey hopes, in conclusion, that all confiding children to her care will find her little establishmen
